DETAILED ACTION

1. Amendment filed on 8/7/03 has been received.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1,3, 7,8, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Schunck et al (U. S. Patent no. 6,053,584).

See control detailed in figure 3 and in column 4 lines 6-63. In general brake pressure is reduced in a decreasing gradient (lines 38-41) independently of the driver's command.

Also see abstract.

4. Claims 1,3,5, 7,8, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Yano.

See figures 9-12. The hillholder function calculates the target braking pressure to maintain the vehicle in a stopped state (see column 10 lines 20-24) and decreases the brake pressure if possible and increases the brake pressure if necessary.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments filed 8/7/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicants argue that Schunck et al. does not use a standstill condition as a triggering factor. This is incorrect. Speed sensors are not accurate at low values (<5 mph) due to noise inherent in the system. The fluctuations due to noise would cause the system to believe that the vehicle was moving when it is actually in standstill and therefore the brakes would be unduly actuated. Therefore, a test of VREF=0 is not a reliable indicator of a standstill condition. To counteract this problem, a check is made for a VREF below a low threshold as Schunck et al does. Anything below this threshold can be reliably considered noise.

Applicants further argue that Yano does not teach a maximal pressure. This is incorrect. Yano uses a Target brake pressure as a maximal brake pressure. If the target pressure is exceeded, the brake pressure is reduced and therefore limited (see figure 12 box 1207).

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
